Jedan od prvih koji je prepoznao pravu vrijednost i veličinu njemačkog kompozitora JOHANESA BRAMSA (1833–1897), bio je Robert Šuman. Godine 1853. u članku objavljenom u Novim muzičkim novinama, ovaj slavni kompozitor i muzički pisac javnosti je predstavio J. Bramsa, koji je tada imao svega 20 godina, kao Novog Mesiju umjetnosti, kompozitora koji je prizvan da u idealnoj formi doprinese najvišem izrazu vremena. Ipak, Brams je bio jedan od naj-samokritičnijih kompozitora. Stotine svojih kompozicija odbacivao je prije nego što bi doživjele izvođenje. Prvu simfoniju komponovao je sa prekidima u periodu od oko dvije decenije da bi je objavio u 43. godini.

Stvaralački razvoj ovog kompozitora može se pratiti kroz 4 perioda koja Hans Gal poredi sa 4 godišnja doba. U proljeće (period koji je trajao do 1853.) on stiče prva znanja iz muzike, postaje vrstan pijanista i nastupa kao pratilac čuvenih violinista svoga doba – Eduarda Reminija i Jozefa Joachima. Većinu djela iz ovog perioda je uništio, a među sačuvanim najznačajnije su 3 sonate za klavir. U drugom stvaralačkom periodu, (ljeto, do 1876. godine), nastaju prva važna djela: varijacioni ciklusi, balade op.10, klavirski komadi op.76, rapsodije op.79, prve dvije sveske Mađarskih igara, vokalne kompozicije, Njemački rekвијem, kamerna djela i Prvi koncert za klavir i orkestar u d-molu. Treći period nastupa od 1876. godine. To je jesenje životno doba koje je najplodnije i najzrelije i obuhvata: 4 simfonije, koncert za klavir i orkestar, koncert za violinu i orkestar, dvostruki koncert za violinu i violončelo i mnoge kamerne kompozicije. Na kraju životnog puta (posle 1890.) u periodu oskudne zime Brams nije mnogo komponovao. Najzanimljivije iz ovog perioda su zbirke klavirskih minijatuu-

One of the first who recognized the real value and magnitude of the German composer JOHANNES BRAHMS (1833–1897), was Robert Schumann. In 1853, in an article published in the New Journal for Music, this famous composer and music writer presented to the public J. Brahms, who was only 20 at that time, as the New Messiah of Art, a composer who was called upon to contribute in an ideal form to the supreme expression of the time. Still, Brahms was one of the most self-critical composers. He rejected hundreds of his compositions before they were performed. He composed his first symphony with interruptions in the period of around two decades, to publish it at the age of 43.

Creative development of this composer can be followed through 4 periods which Hans Gal compares to 4 seasons. In spring (period that lasted until 1853) he acquired the first knowledge of music, became an extraordinary pianist and appeared as the accompanist of famous violinists of his time – Edward Remini and Joseph Joachim. He destroyed most of his works from this period, and among those preserved the most significant are 3 sonatas for the piano. In the second creative period, (summer, until 1876), his first important works were created: variation cycles, ballads op.10, piano pieces op.76, rhapsodies op.79, first two books of Hungarian Dances, vocal compositions, German requiem, chamber works and the First Concerto for Piano and Orchestra in d-major. The third period starts from 1876. That is the autumn of his life, which is the most fertile and most mature and includes: 4 symphonies, concerto for piano and orchestra, concerto for violin and orchestra, double concerto for violin and violoncello ra (op.116-119), kvintet za klarinet i gudač i sonate za klarinet i klavir.

Svi koncerti, izuzev Prvog za klavir i orkestar, nastali su u trećem periodu stvaralaštva, kada i simfonije. Nasuprot virtuoznom koncertu XIX vijeka Brams je njegovao simfonizirani tip koncerta u kojem su solista i orkestar ravnopravni, a oblik se gradi na način simfonizacije muzičkog tkiva. Ovaj tip koncerta srećemo i u opusima R. Šumana, F. Lista, P. I. Čajkovskog, S. Rahmanjinova i A. Dvoržaka. Ravnopravnost soliste i orkestra se ogleda u tipu tematizma, eksponiranju i razvoju tematskog materijala, u povećanom značaju razvojnog djela /koji je simfonijski koncipiran/ i više ne predstavlja mjesto na kojem solista u nizu tipiziranih virtuoznih momenata pokazuje svoje izvođačko umijeće.

Koncert za violinu i orkestar nastao je 1878. godine. Tokom komponovanja ovog veoma zahtjevnog djela Brams se konsultovao sa Jozefom Joakimom u vezi violinske tehnike. Ozbiljno raspoloženje prvog stava nagovještava se melodijom i instrumentacijom: fagoti, viole i violončela donose prvu temu, koju zatim preuzima oboja. U drugom stavu glavna tema vezana je za stihove „O, kada bih znao put unatrag, drugi put u zemlju djetinjstva“, dok treći stav u stilu mađarskog folklora, donosi smireniji završetak djela.

and numerous chamber compositions. At the end of his life road (after 1890), in the period of barren winter Brahms did not compose much. The most interesting from this period are collections of piano miniatures (op.116-119), quintet for clarinet and strings and sonatas for clarinet and piano.

All the concertos, except the First concerto for piano and orchestra, originate from the third period of creation, just like the symphonies. In distinction from the virtuoso concert of XIX century, Brahms cherished the symphonized type of concert in which the soloist and the orchestra are equal, and the form is built in the manner of music tissue symphonization. This type of concert is found in the opuses of R. Schumann, F. Liszt, P.I. Tchaikovsky, S. Rachmaninoff and A. Dvorak. Equality of the soloist and the orchestra is reflected in the type of themes, exponing and development of thematic material, in the increased significance of development part/ which is conceived symphonically/ and does not represent any more a place at which the soloist shows his performing capabilities in a range of typicized virtuous moments.

Concerto for violin and orchestra originated in 1878. While composing this highly demanding work, Brahms consulted Joseph Joachim in relation to the violin technique. Serious disposition of the first movement is announced with melody and instrumentation: bassoons, violas and violoncellos bring the first theme, which is then taken over by oboe. In the second movement the main theme is related to the verses „O, if I knew the way back, the second way into the country of my childhood“, while the third movement in the style of Hungarian folklore, brings more peaceful ending to the work.

PETAR ILJIĆ ČAJKOVSKI (1840–1893)

jedna od vodećih ličnosti ruskog muzičkog života u drugoj polovini XIX vijeka, stvarao je u okvirima romantičarskog stila, unoseći u njega mnoge novine koje rusku nacionalnu školu čine prepoznatljivom. Mada je u svoje vrijeme često suprostavljan težnjama Petorice i optuživan za „evropejstvo“, danas je jasno da su ovi umjetnici dijelili iste ideale, te da je stvaralaštvo Čajkovskog moguće razmatrati jedino kao dio ruske nacionalne muzike. Zahvaljujući materijalnoj pomoći svog mecene Nadežde fon Mek, ovaj kompozitor razvija vrlo intezivnu stvaralačku djelatnost dugu skoro 30 godina, ostvarujući širok dijapazon različitih vidova obogaćenja opere, baleta, simfonije, koncerta...

Simfoniju je smatrao najlirsijom od svih muzičkih formi, za njega je simfonijsko djelo bez programa predstavljalo muzičku ispovjest duše, koja je prepuna i koja se mora izliti posredstvom zvukova, na sličan način kao što se pjesnik iskazuje stihovima.

Četvrta simfonija u f-molu (1877) zasnovana je na sapostavljanju dvaju kontrastirajućih planova. Prvi stav nosi dramski karakter, dok dva srednja stava (lirska Andantino in modo di cancona i humoristički scherzo) nose u sebi, umjesto unutrašnjih duševnih preživljavanja, žanrovsko-karakteristične elemente. Široku sliku života daje finale, u kojem je prikazano praznično narodno veselje.

U pismu Nadeždi fon Mek, Čajkovski je istakao: „Postoji i program za našu simfoniju tj. mogućnost da se njezin sadržaj prikaže riječima, i ja će Vama, i jedino Vama iznijeti značenje, kako cjeline djela, tako i njegovih pojedinačnih stavova. Uvod je jezgro čitave simfonije; u njemu se nalazi glavna misao. To je sudbina, fatalna sila koja

PYOTR ILYICH TCHAIKOVSKY (1840–1893)

one of the leading figures of Russian music life in the second part of XIX century, created within the frame of Romanticist style, bringing into it numerous novices which Russian national school is recognizable for. Even though at his time he frequently opposed the aspirations of the Five and was accused for his „European ideals“, it is clear today that these artists shared the same ideals, and that the creation of Tchaikovsky can only be considered as part of the Russian national music. Owing to material support of his Maecenas Nadezhda von Meck, this composer developed very intensive creative activity almost 30 years long, achieving a wide range of various forms for enriching opera, ballet, symphony, concerto...

He considered symphony the most lyrical of all music forms, for him symphony work without programme represented music confession of the soul, which is overfull and which must spill out by means of sounds, in a similar manner as a poet expresses himself with verses.

Symphony No 4 in f-minor (1877) is based on the opposition between two contrasting planes. The first movement bears dramatic character, while two middle movements (lyrical Andantino in modo di cancona and humoristic scherzo) instead of internal spiritual survival bear in themselves genre-characteristic elements. The finale gives a wide picture of life, presenting festive national merriment.

In a letter to Nadezhda von Meck, Tchaikovsky pointed out: „There is also a programme for our symphony i.e. the possibility to present its content through words, and I will present to You, and only You, the meaning of the entire work, and sprečava da težnja za srećom dođe do svoga cilja i ljubomorno nadzire da blaženstvo i mir preovladaju; ona sprečava da nebo ne bude nikada bez oblaka... Dakle, čitav život nije ništa drugo do vječita smjena mračne stvarnosti i nestalnih snova o sreći. Drugi stav nam opisuje patnje u novom stadijumu. To je ono melanholično osjećanje koje se javlja u predvečerje kad čovjek sjedi osamljen, umoran od rada, a knjiga koju je uzeo isklizne mu iz ruku i pojavi se čitav roj uspomena. U trećem stavu ne dolazi do izraza nikakvo određeno osjećanje. To su kapriciozne arabeske, neodređeni likovi koji jure kroz maštu kada čovjek popije čašicu vina". Završavajući ciklus, finale (sa citatima iz narodne pjesme „U polju je brezica stajala“) potvrđuje da se samo u odricanju od subjektivne zatvorenosti može naći put od očajanja ka radosti: „Raduj se zbog radosti drugih i moći ćeš još da živiš“. Po tipu i karakteru, finale je blizak prvim simfonijama, ali u Četvrtoj, žanrovska slika dobija dubok smisao u vezi sa opštom idejom simfonije: „Ako sam u sebi ne nalaziš motiva za radost, pogledaj na druge ljudе. Idi među narod“.

Zamisao Četvrte simfonije – kao ideja vječno nametljive utvare sudsbine, fatuma – naći će razvitak i u daljim simfonijama. Ipak, Čajkovski se ne ponavlja, već traži nova razrešenja iste teme, svaki put na drugačijoj površini.

of its individual movements. Introduction is the core of the entire symphony; it contains the main thought. That is destiny, the fatal force that prevents aspiration for happiness to reach its objective and jealously sees to it that bliss and peace prevail; it prevents the sky from never being without clouds... Thus, entire life is nothing but an eternal alternation of sombre reality and disappeared dreams of happiness. The second movement describes suffering in the new stage. This is that melancholic feeling that appears when a man sits in solitude, tired of work, and the book he took slips from his hands and memories teem. In the third movement no particular feeling comes into fore. These are capricious arabesques, indefinite personages running through imagination when a man drinks a glass of wine". Ending the cycle, the finale (with quotes from the national song „In the field a birch tree stood“) confirms that the way from desperation to delight can only be found in renunciation of subjective confinement: „Rejoice the delight of others and you will be able to live more“. According to its type and character, the finale is close to the first symphonies, but in the Fourth, the genre picture gains deep sense related to the general idea of symphony: „if you do not find motive for delight in yourself, look at other people. Go among people“.

The idea of the Fourth Symphony – as the idea of eternally intrusive spectre of fate, fatum – will further be developed in later symphonies. Still, Tchaikovsky does not repeat himself, but searches for new resolutions for the same theme, each time on a different plane.
